

The Twilight Zone

Twilight fans flock to Forks, WA, where the series is based, to get their fill of vampire eats.

Bella Italia

Twilight author Stephenie Meyer had never been to Bella Italia when she picked it as the spot for Edward and Bella's first date. But she did call owner Neil Conklin to ask about the menu before deciding on mushroom ravioli as Bella's order. Now the dish is the restaurant's most requested item—it's so popular that Bella Italia started selling a frozen version of the entrée online.
118 East First St., Port Angeles, WA; bellaitaliapa.com

Sully's Drive-In

Twihards visit this burger joint from around the world. One group of women even came to the restaurant with a life-size cardboard cutout of Edward Cullen, the saga's leading vampire, and put him in a corner so he could watch them eat.
220 North Forks Ave.; 360-374-5075

Miller Tree Inn Bed and Breakfast

In 2008, the chamber of commerce designated this "The Cullen House" because it matched the description in the books. While vampires might prefer to eat bears, overnight guests here wake up to house specialties like apple pancakes.
654 East Division St.; millertreeinn.com

JT's Sweet Stuffs

So many people come to this specialty candy and ice cream shop wanting to talk Twilight that owner Janet Hughes started requiring her staff to read the series. "I have a copy that I give them," she says. "They're usually done reading the books within a day or two."
80 North Forks Ave.; 360-374-6111

Three Rivers Resort

In the series, there's a "treaty line" that separates vampire and werewolf territory. All this resort had to do to earn itself a spot on a locally run Twilight tour was put up a sign that reads "Treaty Line." Now up to four buses a day stop at its restaurant-shop!
7764 La Push Rd.; 360-374-5300

Pacific Pizza

When fans first started flocking to Forks, the chamber of commerce asked local restaurants to put Twilight-themed items on the menu. Now six dishes here are named after characters. Visitors are eating up the Swan Salad and Ed Bread—sales have jumped 25 percent.
870 South Forks Ave.; 360-374-2626

ILLUSTRATION: JAMES LAISH; INSET: MOVIESTORE COLLECTION LTD./ALAMY.